

Background

- The Stockholm Junior Water Prize (SJWP) is the most prestigious international award for a water related science project at the high school level.
- The Stockholm International Water Institute (SIWI) established the SJWP competition in 1997 to mirror the adult Stockholm Water Prize, the world's most prominent award for outstanding achievements in water-related activities. The international competition is an impressive week-long event that occurs each annually in Stockholm, Sweden, and the award is presented by a member of the Royal Family.
- The WEF Canadian Member Associations have been organizing a Canadian competition since 2003 to select a national student project to represent Canada at the SJWP competition.

Why become the Official Partner of the CSJWP?

Becoming a partner of the CSJWP means you are investing in future water leaders. It is a great way to differentiate yourself from your competitors by demonstrating your authority as an industry expert and a key indicator to your target audience that your brand is both forward-thinking and socially responsible.

The International Stockholm Junior Water Prize contest is held during the World Water Week in Stockholm each August and gathers the world's brightest young minds to create real solutions for the global water crisis. Over 10,000 students from over 30 countries compete for a spot in the international final. In Stockholm, finalists meet other water innovators, make lasting connections and are challenged to solve global water needs. The goal of the competition is to inspire young people to remain engaged in water and the environment.

The Canadian participant for the contest is selected through the Canada Wide Science Fair by a panel of judges supplied by the Canadian Member Associations of the Water Environment Federation and the Canadian Water and Wastewater Association. The winner of the Canadian Stockholm Junior Water Prize contest competes at the International Contest.

By partnering with the CSJWP, you share in the prestige of this award along with the winner by helping make their participation possible. The winner will represent Canada at the International Stockholm Junior Water Prize competition in Sweden. Through your generous sponsorship your organization will be exposed to an audience of over 20,000 people.
